Voiced

BRAND KIT · 2026

Nothing for me, without me.

How Voiced looks, sounds and shows up: the logo, colors, fonts, signature details and voice that make every page, flyer and slide feel like one thing.

Version 1.0 · October 2026

01 · WHO WE ARE

Every symptom deserves a real look, not a shrug and a label.

Voiced helps people with Down syndrome, their families, and their clinicians catch what diagnostic overshadowing hides: when a real, treatable symptom gets waved off as "just Down syndrome."

Mission

Voiced exists so that people with Down syndrome are heard, not overlooked, in healthcare.

Who it's for

Self-advocates with Down syndrome, the families and caregivers beside them, and the clinicians who want to get it right.

What we give them

Tools to prepare for appointments, explain what's normal for them, and speak up, so every visit leads to real answers.

Nothing for me, without me.

Our guiding principle, borrowed from the disability rights movement. Every tool, page and message is built with self-advocates, not just for them. When in doubt, ask: would the person this is about feel included and respected reading it?

The mark

A butter-yellow V on a navy circle, with two faint sky rings like sound moving outward: a voice being heard. Use the mark with the wordmark set in Funnel Display ExtraBold, or the mark alone where space is tight.

Primary. Navy wordmark on white or Mist.

Reversed. Mist wordmark on Navy. The outer ring separates the mark from the background.

On color. Navy wordmark on Butter, Sky or Coral.

Clear space

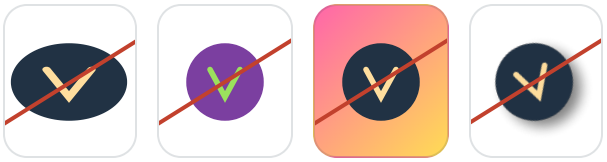

Keep a quarter of the mark's width empty on every side.

Minimum size

Mark alone: 24px / 0.25in. With wordmark: 18px mark. Below about 32px, the inner ring can be dropped.

03 · COLOR

Calm, warm, and easy to read

Navy carries the words. Mist is the page. Sky, Coral and Butter are the warmth: use one at a time as a highlight, never all three on one element.

05 · SIGNATURE DETAILS

Hand-drawn, soft, and solid

A few details make something feel like Voiced at a glance. Use them with restraint: one hand-drawn mark per headline, one offset shadow per group.

The pen stroke

not a shrug and a label.

waved off as "just Down syndrome."

A Sky double underline marks the last word of a page title. A soft Coral loop circles the phrase we're pushing back on. Slightly uneven on purpose: it should look like someone cared enough to mark it by hand.

Prep for an appointment

Always fully rounded and at least 44px tall, so they're easy to tap. Coral is the main action, Sky is secondary, Navy outline is the alternative. Label buttons with what happens: "Build a summary," not "Submit."

Rounded corners

8px for inputs, 14px for tiles, 20px for cards, 24px for big panels. Nothing is sharp-cornered.

06 · VOICE

How Voiced sounds

Like a knowledgeable friend sitting next to you in the waiting room: on your side, plain-spoken, and never talking down.

Plain, not clinical

Short sentences and everyday words. Explain a medical term the first time it appears. If a self-advocate couldn't read it on their own, rewrite it.

Respectful, not pitying

People with Down syndrome are the experts on their own lives. Speak to them directly, not only about them, and never frame them as a burden or a tragedy.

Confident, not alarming

We help people speak up and ask better questions. We never diagnose, and we never promise outcomes. In an emergency, we say call 911.

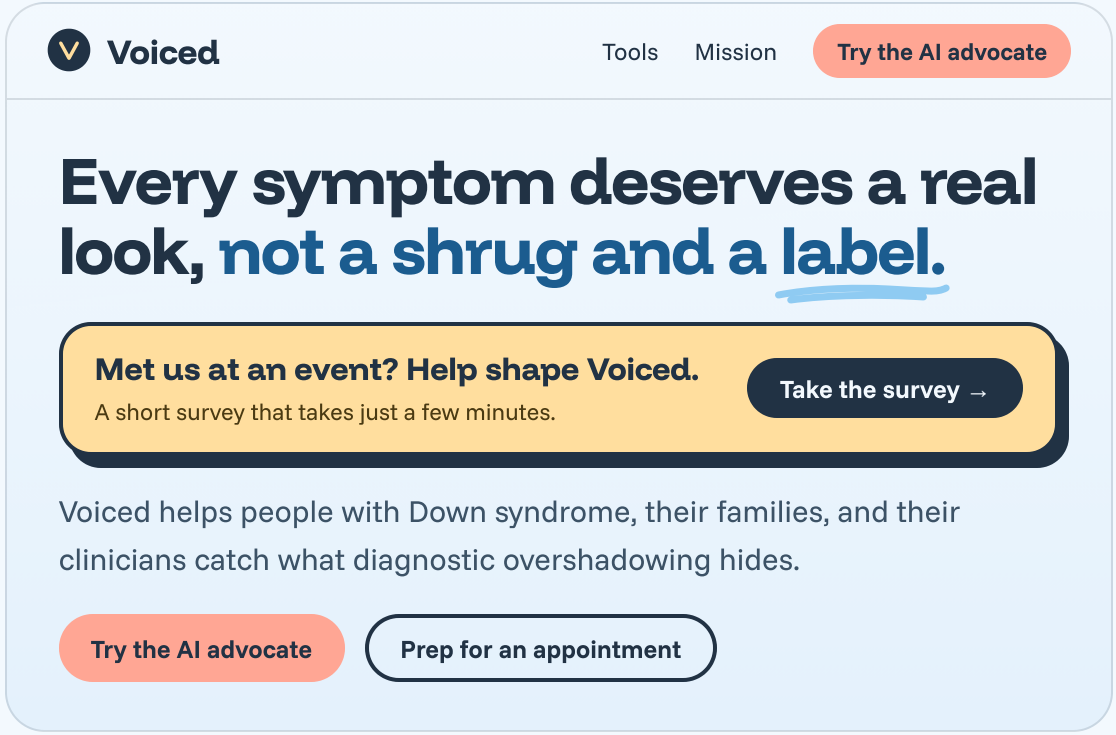

Say

- “person with Down syndrome,” “self-advocate”
- Ask what someone wants to be called, and use it
- “Bring this summary to your appointment.”
- “This is new for me, and it isn't how I usually feel.”
- “It never diagnoses. It helps you advocate.”

Avoid

- “Down's,” “a Down syndrome child,” “suffers from”
- Jargon without a plain explanation
- “Don't worry, it's probably nothing.”
- Promises like “get the right diagnosis”
- Cute or childish language for adults

The home page, by the rules

1 · One idea per headline

Funnel Display ExtraBold, with the turn in Link blue and one pen stroke.

2 · Butter means “news”

Time-sensitive asks go in a Butter banner with a Navy shadow.

3 · One Coral button

The main action is Coral. Everything else is outline or Sky.

4 · Lots of Mist

Generous space keeps it calm for people reading slowly or under stress.
